++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
It'll be cloudy and windy today but will feel mild. Eastern areas will stay mostly dry with some morning brightness but it'll be wetter in the west, especially on the higher ground. Heavy showers in the southwest will spread eastwards into the afternoon but will ease and clear tonight.

Outlook for Wednesday and Thursday:

It'll be cloudy for most tomorrow, with rain moving southwards, turning heavy on the high ground. Some sunny spells in Scotland and Northern Ireland, although blustery showers will affect northwestern parts. On Thursday, most places will start off fine and dry before rain, which will be heavy at times, crosses later.
