

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Wednesday 05 Jun 2013

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Cloudy start across central and eastern parts with some showers in western Scotland. The cloud will lift and break-up inland to give some warm sunny spells, but low cloud may linger in some coastal areas. Isolated heavy showers developing across Scotland and Northern Ireland later. A mainly dry night will follow with clear spells allowing isolated fog patches to form.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:

It will remain fine throughout Thursday and Friday with further warm sunny spells, though some isolated showers may develop during daylight hours, mainly in the north. It will feel cooler around the coasts where sea breezes are likely to develop.

(C) Crown Copyright 2013. Published by the Met Office.