

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Thursday 04 Jun 2015

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Much of England and Wales will be dry today, with plenty of warm sunshine. It will be cloudier across Northern Ireland and Scotland, with some patchy rain possible. Overnight, heavy thundery showers are likely to develop across southeastern and eastern parts of England.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:

Rain across the northwest will continue to move southeastwards across the UK on Friday, with brighter but fresher conditions following. Warm ahead of the rain, with sunny spells and very warm in the far east with thundery showers. Fresher on Saturday for all with some sunshine, though turning windy across the north with scattered showers developing.

(C) Crown Copyright 2015. Published by the Met Office.