++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Wet and windy across Scotland, northern England, Northern Ireland and North Wales. The rain particularly heavy and persistent across southwest Scotland and Cumbria. Fine, breezy and quite warm elsewhere across England and Wales, and steadily brightening-up across northern Scotland later this afternoon. Many places will be dry tonight, though rather wet across Wales and northern England.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:
Dry and bright across much of the United Kingdom over the weekend, although a cloudy, damp zone of weather is expected across southern Wales, and the Midlands on Saturday. It will also turn wet and windy across Northern Ireland and Scotland during Sunday.
