++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Mainly cloudy across the country to start the morning, with outbreaks of rain in many areas, especially down the east coast. Through the day the weather will brighten in places, particularly the south and west, with sunny spells for some. However the sunshine may trigger showers, sometimes heavy, especially in the Midlands.

Outlook for Wednesday and Thursday:

Wednesday will be largely cloudy with rain or showers for most, but with a little brightness in between wetter spells. Thursday will see sunny spells for some, mainly in the southeast, but heavy showers in the north and southwest, sometimes merging to longer spells of rain.
