

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Monday 05 Sep 2011

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Sunny spells with showers, these occasionally heavy, especially across England and Wales with lightning possible. Showers easing in western areas before heavy rain spreads to Northern Ireland and Wales later. Windy. Overnight, rain will spread eastwards, becoming heavy over western coasts and hills. Again windy at times particularly in south and west. Mild and misty with fog over western coasts.

Outlook for Tuesday and Wednesday:
Rain will slowly clear southwards. Then brighter for a time over Wales and much of England, but heavy showers will continue over Northern England, Northern Ireland and Scotland. Showers in the north on Wednesday, drier and brighter in the south.

(C) Crown Copyright 2011. Published by the Met Office.