Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Friday 03 Aug 2007

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Wet and windy in the northwest today, cloudy and damp over western parts.
Central and eastern England will be dry and warm with sunny spells. Rain over Scotland will spread across N.Ireland and northwest England this evening, clearing N.Ireland and most of Scotland overnight. Damp in western parts overnight, dry over central and eastern England. Warm.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:
Mostly cloudy but dry tomorrow over N.Ireland and Scotland. Cloudy with rain over northwest Wales and northwest England. Fine, dry and very warm elsewhere.
Largely fine in the north on Sunday, with rain in the west. Hot, perhaps with thunderly showers developing further east.
