

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Friday 08 Aug 2008

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Most parts will have a dry day with some sunny intervals, although a few light showers are also possible. These being most likely to crop up in eastern parts. The showers will die out this evening, with much of the night being dry. However, rain will spread into the west by dawn.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:

Wet and breezy weather will spread eastwards on Saturday, reaching the southeast around the mid afternoon. Brighter weather then following into the west during the afternoon. Sunday will be windy in the north with frequent showers. Sunny spells and a few showers in the south.

(C) Crown Copyright 2008. Published by the Met Office.