++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Much of England and Wales will enjoy a fine and dry day today, although western counties may see the odd shower too. Meanwhile, wet and windy weather will spread across north-western parts through the day. The rain will slip south-eastwards overnight, reaching northern England and Wales by dawn. Staying dry further south, although the skies will turn increasingly cloudy.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:

A brighter day across Scotland tomorrow, although north-western counties will see some showers. Cloudy skies elsewhere, with outbreaks of rain across Wales and northern England. Friday will bring further unsettled weather, with rain and showers, but also some warm sunshine.
