

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Saturday 07 Aug 2010

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
The rain in East Anglia and the Shetland Islands will quickly clear away this morning, but scattered showers in northern and western parts will linger for some time yet. Elsewhere it will start cloudy but there will be some sunny periods later. Further occasional showers will develop in the south and east. The night will be dry with light winds.

Outlook for Sunday and Monday:

Sunday will be a fine and dry day for all areas except Northern Ireland, where rain will move in from the west and turn heavy from time to time. On Monday more rain will spread to the west and Scotland.

(C) Crown Copyright 2010. Published by the Met Office.