++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Variable, often large amounts of cloud today, but some breaks allowing bright or sunny spells, the best of these for eastern Scotland and northeast England. Perhaps a little drizzle for some northwestern parts. Clear spells tonight in places allowing some frost as well as some fog patches. Otherwise, largely cloudy.

Outlook for Tuesday and Wednesday:

There will be very little change for both Tuesday and Wednesday. Northeast Scotland will have the best of the sunshine and afternoon warmth. Often cloudy elsewhere, though there should be some sunny spells at times. The odd spot of drizzle is possible, especially over hills.
