

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Saturday 28 Feb 2015

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Rather cloudy with some patchy light rain and drizzle, but also some brighter spells, especially in the northeast. Very windy overnight with gales for many, locally severe across Northern Ireland and southern Scotland. Rain moving east, heaviest in the northwest. Clearer, colder, showery conditions spreading from the northwest later.

Outlook for Sunday and Monday:

Very windy, gales for many, locally severe in the north at first Sunday. Sunshine and blustery showers, heaviest and increasingly wintry in northwest. Longer spells of rain possible in the south. Cold and windy with further wintry showers through Monday. Showers merging into longer spells of rain and snow at times.

(C) Crown Copyright 2015. Published by the Met Office.