

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Friday 09 Dec 2016

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Outbreaks of rain in the north and west. Some early hill fog and low cloud in the east and southeast. Otherwise, mainly dry with variable cloud and brighter spells. It'll be mild again for most. Rain over the north-west turning to clearer skies and showers overnight. Rain over Wales and northern England sinking south-eastwards. A mild night in the south.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:

Outbreaks of locally heavy rain across Wales and southern UK on Saturday, slowly clearing south-east. Brighter elsewhere, but windy with showers in the north-west. Less mild in the north. Colder and brighter on Sunday with some rain in the north-west.

(C) Crown Copyright 2016. Published by the Met Office.