++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Very windy in the north, with a scattering of showers through the day. However, fine and mostly dry across northern England, Northern Ireland and southern Scotland. Meanwhile, cloudy in the south, with outbreaks of rain. Turning windy from the south overnight, as cloud and rain, heavy and at times persistent, spreads north-eastwards, turning to snow across parts of the north.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:

Very windy on Thursday with rain at first, turning to snow over northern hills, clearing to showers later, these wintry in places. Sunny spells and occasional showers on Friday, though rain and strengthening winds will arrive from the west later.
