

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Saturday 10 Aug 2013

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
A mostly dry day in England and Wales with sunny spells, but feeling fresher than of late. Further scattered showers likely across Scotland and Northern Ireland. Perhaps a few showers in western England and Wales later in the afternoon. Showers becoming more widespread across the UK overnight and some heavy bursts are possible later, especially across Scotland.

Outlook for Sunday and Monday:
Breezy with sunshine and showers across northern areas both days, with showers turning locally heavy and thundery at times. A few showers across southern parts at first on Sunday, but becoming largely dry later that day and remaining so during Monday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2013. Published by the Met Office.