

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Saturday 26 Aug 2017

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Many will have a fine day today with sunny spells once any early morning mist and fog clears. However, a few showers are possible, mainly across northeast England and eastern Scotland. Feeling warm, especially in the south with light winds. Most places will be dry overnight, with clear spells.

Outlook for Sunday and Monday:
Another dry and bright day is expected for many tomorrow, with spells of warm sunshine. Clouding over at times across the northwest, with a little drizzle possible. Staying warm and sunny across southern, central and eastern areas on Monday. However, wet and windy weather will move in across the northwest.

(C) Crown Copyright 2017. Published by the Met Office.