Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Rain across central parts of the UK will continue northwards, becoming confined to central and northern Scotland by the end of the day, and lingering overnight. Elsewhere things will be brighter but more showery with gales in the south. The showers will be heavy at times and are going to continue through the night.

Outlook for Wednesday and Thursday:

The rain over northwest Scotland may persist through Wednesday. Away from here there will be sunny spells and blustery showers, with the risk of hail, thunder and gales in places. Thursday's looking windy and shower in the north but drier further south.
