

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Wednesday 08 Aug 2007

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Most places will have some sunshine today, but a few showers are likely, especially in the east, one or two in the southeast may still be heavy. Later, northwestern areas will turn cloudier. It will feel warm in sunshine and light winds. Tonight, most places will be dry, clear and chilly.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:
Most places will be mostly dry with some sunshine, and it should feel pleasantly warm by day in sunshine and light winds. Nights however, will be distinctly chilly with some patchy mist. Northwestern areas will be cloudier with a little rain at times.

(C) Crown Copyright 2007. Published by the Met Office.