

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Friday 08 Jun 2012

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Cloudy, wet and windy across much of the UK. Heavy rain at times, especially for Wales where the rain will be persistent. Gales across the southern half of the UK. Becoming drier and brighter in the far south later. Tonight, remaining windy with further patchy rain for many, still heavy rain for parts of Wales. Clearer spells in the southwest.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:

Sunny spells in the southwest on Saturday, slowly spreading to Wales and other southern parts. Elsewhere, remaining rather cloudy with showery rain at times. Winds gradually easing. On Sunday less breezy, but remaining unsettled with some rain in the south.

(C) Crown Copyright 2012. Published by the Met Office.