

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Friday 18 Aug 2017

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Windy today, with rain moving northeastwards across Scotland, turning heavy at times. Elsewhere, a mix of sunny spells and showers, with hail and thunder possible. However, more organised rain will likely reach Wales later in the afternoon, continuing to spread eastwards thereafter. Rain will clear to the east this evening, leaving a mix of clear spells and occasional showers overnight.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:

Sunshine on Saturday, and blustery showers for northern and western parts, though the showers will become more isolated through the day. Largely dry elsewhere with some sun, although turning cloudy in the southwest later. Meanwhile, rain spreads northeastwards on Sunday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2017. Published by the Met Office.