

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Saturday 08 Oct 2016

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Most places will be dry today with cloudy periods accompanied by sunny breaks.
In western Scotland and northwest England the emphasis will be on the sunshine, whilst the southeast of England will be mainly cloudy, with a few light showers.
It will stay mainly dry and become rather cool overnight, though a few showers are possible in the east.

Outlook for Sunday and Monday:
Western areas will be dry tomorrow and on Monday with more sunshine and lighter winds than today. There will be some sunshine further east, but showers will be more widespread and more prolific there. Colder nights are likely across the country.

(C) Crown Copyright 2016. Published by the Met Office.