Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom for daytime tomorrow:
Scattered showers will continue at first on Thursday morning, locally merging to give some longer spells of heavier rain in places, especially in the north and west. It will then turn drier and brighter for most, although some showers are likely to persist in the west. The winds will ease, but it will remain rather cold.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:

There'll be a fine and frosty start on Friday, although cloud and rain will reach Northern Ireland and western Scotland later in the day. The rain then spreading to all parts on Saturday and turning windy for many. It will continue to feel cool.
