

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Wednesday 07 Jun 2017

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
The north and east will start windy with further rain in eastern Scotland, but the wind will ease later and the whole UK will become dry with sunshine. Rain will arrive in the south-west later and it will become breezy. The rain will soon spread north-eastwards, reaching Scotland around dawn.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:

More heavy rain in Wales and south-west England will move into central and northern England and later into Scotland and Northern Ireland followed by showers. Friday will stay wet and windy for most, though there will be dry spells. The south-east will warm up and there will be less rain there.

(C) Crown Copyright 2017. Published by the Met Office.