

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Wednesday 09 Sep 2009

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Cloud and some light rain across East Anglia and Southeast England should move away during the afternoon. Western parts of Scotland will see a few showers during the day. Elsewhere it should be dry and fine with long spells of sunshine and it should feel quite pleasant in the sunshine.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:

A few showers for Scotland on Thursday but dry for much of the UK with spells of sunshine. The best of the sunshine will be in the west with more cloud at times along eastern parts of England. It will be quite chilly inland overnight but pleasant during the day.

(C) Crown Copyright 2009. Published by the Met Office.