

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Monday 01 Aug 2011

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Most southeastern and some central parts of the country will be dry and very warm, with sunny intervals. Cloudier conditions towards the north and west, with further outbreaks of rain. This turning heavy at times by the afternoon and evening. Drier over Northern Ireland. Overnight, rain continues to affect northern and western parts of the UK. Elsewhere dry and mild.

Outlook for Tuesday and Wednesday:

Most parts of the UK will see scattered thundery showers developing, especially on Wednesday. Feeling warm and humid, even hot across the southeast of England. It will then begin to turn fresher across western parts of the UK on Wednesday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2011. Published by the Met Office.