Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
It will be a dry, bright start for most, but there will be a scattering of locally heavy and thundery showers in the far west. These showers, again possibly heavy and thundery, will develop widely across the UK by afternoon, but by evening, they will be confined to the west again, with most parts seeing a dry night.

Outlook for Monday and Tuesday:

Monday will see further showers develop, particularly in the north, interspersed with some sunny spells. However, more persistent rain will reach the southwest by evening. This rain will spread across much of the UK during Tuesday, driven on by strong southwesterly winds.
