

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Friday 18 Jun 2010

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Cloud and outbreaks of rain affecting Southern Scotland and Northern England this morning move slowly southwards today, eventually clearing the south coast overnight tonight. Away from the cloud it will be mostly dry with some sunshine today and clear periods overnight. Eastern areas become cloudy and windy overnight with occasional light showers.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:

Staying cool, breezy and rather cloudy in northern and eastern areas, with scattered light showers in eastern England and perhaps some rain or drizzle across northern Scotland. Brighter and generally warmer elsewhere with sunny periods, the best of these in the south and west on Sunday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2010. Published by the Met Office.