Most places starting cool and cloudy, with isolated patches of rain or drizzle on hills. Across the Midlands and Wales, a larger band of rain moving slowly southwards, turning showery through the morning. Many places dry and bright through the afternoon, but some scattered sharp showers too, these heaviest in southeast England. Sunny spells developing in northern and western parts.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:
Steadily becoming drier and brighter from the southwest through Friday, with sunny spells developing. Showers persisting in some eastern parts, but these fewer than on Thursday. Even fewer showers on Saturday, a fine day for the majority of the country.
