

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Thursday 02 Feb 2017

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Bands of rain will move eastwards across most parts today, turning heavy at times. Whilst it will be relatively mild it won't feel like it in the strong winds, with gales likely in the west. After a mild start to the night with further rain affecting most parts, it should turn somewhat clearer and colder some blustery showers.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:

To start on Friday there will be blustery showers, mainly in the north, then some rain and very strong winds will spread from the southwest. the focus of the unsettled weather will push northwards on Saturday with some sunshine further south.

(C) Crown Copyright 2017. Published by the Met Office.