++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Cloudy, wet and rather windy today. The rain heavy at times in the west, where it could also be fairly persistent. The odd brighter spell is possible in the east. Feeling chilly with brisk west or northwesterly winds. Tonight, cloudy with outbreaks of rain in the south, perhaps heavier later. Becoming drier in the north. Winds easing.

Outlook for Monday and Tuesday:
Cloudy for northern Scotland on Monday. Cloud and heavy, showery rain gradually clearing the far south of England. Otherwise, bright spells with the odd shower. Cloudy with outbreaks of rain in the north on Tuesday, but mainly fair in the south.
