Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Friday 19 Dec 2008

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Wet and windy weather will spread eastwards across Northern Ireland, Scotland, northern England and north Wales, proceeded by snow across upland Scotland. Generally bright and breezy further south, though gradually clouding-over from the northwest. Largely cloudy and windy tonight, with further rain across central Britain and Northern Ireland. Clearer across Scotland tonight, but stormy winds in the north.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:

Mild, cloudy and breezy in the south and west Saturday, with rain in places. Colder but sunnier across Scotland and northeast England on Saturday. Bright and breezy in the southeast on Sunday, but increasingly windy and wet towards the north and west.
