Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
There will be some sunny intervals in the south, but further slow moving, heavy, thundery showers will develop through the day. Rain across central areas will gradually drift southwards and ease. Northern areas will be mainly fine with sunny spells and just a few showers. Showers will gradually ease overnight.

Outlook for Sunday and Monday:

It is likely to become generally more settled than on previous days with a good deal of fine and dry weather. A few isolated showers are still likely at times though, especially in the east on Sunday where they may be heavy for a time.
