

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Wednesday 10 Sep 2014

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Any early mist or fog will soon clear to leave a fine day for most with plenty of warm sunny spells, the best of these in the west. Staying dry with clear spells overnight allowing it to turn chilly, with mist or fog patches forming once again. Slightly cloudier in the southeast, with the odd spot of drizzle possible later.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:

It will remain fine and settled with variable cloud and sunny spells, the best of these in the north and west, although it may be chilly here by night. Eastern parts of the UK may be cloudier at times though.

(C) Crown Copyright 2014. Published by the Met Office.