

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Tuesday 19 Sep 2017

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
A chilly start with some patchy mist and fog in places. Any mist or fog clearing through the morning. Otherwise, a dry day with plenty of sunny spells and light winds. Mostly dry overnight, although some cloud and rain pushing into Northern Ireland and western Scotland in the small hours and the odd light shower in the southwest.

Outlook for Wednesday and Thursday:

Wednesday will see rain and gusty winds for western and northwest parts of the UK. It will be a dry day with sunny spells elsewhere. The rain and cloud will spread eastwards on Thursday with clearer conditions moving into the west later.

(C) Crown Copyright 2017. Published by the Met Office.