

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Monday 06 Jan 2014

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Heavy, blustery showers spreading east across all areas with a risk of hail and thunder, but some sunshine too. Strong winds, with gales along exposed coasts, combine with exceptionally large waves to bring a risk of coastal flooding. Remaining windy overnight, with showers persisting in many parts. This will help keep temperatures up, leading to a mild, frost free night.

Outlook for Tuesday and Wednesday:

Tuesday will remain windy, but less so than Monday. Further showers may be on the heavy side, these most frequent in the northwest and southeast. The winds will continue to ease further on Wednesday, with showers becoming less frequent too.

(C) Crown Copyright 2014. Published by the Met Office.