

National Severe Weather Warning Service

Chief Forecasters Assessment

A deep low in the North Sea will slowly move away eastwards on Monday. Gusts into the 40's and locally 50's mph are expected around exposed coasts, and waves will be large.

While such wind gusts would not be unusual in the autumn and winter, they are likely to pose greater risks in the summer holiday period, especially to those engaged in outdoor activities such as sailing or hill walking. Some minor disruption to transport is possible, for example delays to ferries, bridge restrictions and perhaps minor damage to trees.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Alert of Wind

Valid from 00:05 on Mon, 18th Aug 2014 until 11:00 on Mon, 18th Aug 2014

Strong winds are expected, bringing some large waves to coastal areas. In addition, frequent, heavy showers will continue to affect parts of northern Scotland.

The public should be aware of possible minor disruption to transport and of the risks to those engaged in outdoor activities.
