

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Monday 02 Mar 2015

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Windy today, and feeling cold, with showers and sunny spells. Showers will be heaviest and most frequent in the north and west, turning wintry to some low levels but with snow accumulations confined to hills. The showers will continue overnight, with sleet and snow settling to increasingly low levels in parts of the north.

Outlook for Tuesday and Wednesday:

Further wintry showers throughout Tuesday with some early snow to low levels in the north, but snow then becoming increasingly confined to hills. Windy again with gales in exposure. Turning drier, brighter and less windy from the west during Wednesday, with a widespread frost overnight.

(C) Crown Copyright 2015. Published by the Met Office.