Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom for daytime tomorrow:
Heavy rain will affect northern and western parts tomorrow, bringing a continued risk of localised flooding, especially on high ground. Elsewhere, it will remain windy, mostly dry and cloudy, with some outbreaks of rain along southern coasts. Temperatures for most will be mild for the time of year.

Outlook for Monday and Tuesday:

Monday will see showers in the north but most of the the UK staying dry with some sunny intervals before rain approaches from the southwest later. This band of rain will make its way northwards throughout Tuesday bringing a wet and cloudy day for many, though with some brighter intervals in Scotland.
