

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Saturday 10 Oct 2015

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Overnight fog patches will clear to leave a dry day with hazy sunshine for most.
There will be further rain in the northwest, whilst parts of the southeast may be rather cloudy at times with a few light showers possible. Clear skies away from the northwest mean it'll turn rather chilly again tonight.

Outlook for Sunday and Monday:

Sunday's looking breezy for many with cloud and light rain in the north, before showers arrive in the northwest later. It'll be drier further south with sunny spells, but feeling chilly in the breeze. Monday should be mostly fine with some sunny spells.

(C) Crown Copyright 2015. Published by the Met Office.