

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Wednesday 25 Jun 2014

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Cloudy today across northwestern parts with outbreaks of rain. Elsewhere, mostly fine with some sunny spells, and perhaps the odd shower in the southwest. Cooler than recently in the south. Overnight, largely dry with clear spells, but further rain across northwestern parts. Turning chilly in the east.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:

Thursday, rain in the northwest easing, but some locally heavy rain moving eastwards across southwestern parts later. Otherwise dry with warm sunny spells, but cooler along eastern coasts. Friday, unsettled across central and southern parts with showers or more persistent rain, and a risk of thundery downpours. Drier and brighter in the north.

(C) Crown Copyright 2014. Published by the Met Office.