

National Severe Weather Warning Service

Chief Forecasters Assessment

An area of low pressure moving north from France will bring a combination of rather persistent and sometimes heavy rainfall, as well as strong winds blowing from the northeast, with gusts in excess of 40 mph in places for a time. The main rain area will clear from the southeast corner of England by the morning, but further heavy, slow-moving and potentially thundery showers are likely to occur. The combination of rain and wind is likely to lead to unpleasant conditions on the roads with spray and surface water, the latter perhaps exacerbated by leaves blocking drains.

15 to 25 mm of rain will fall in many parts of the warning area, with a few places likely to catch in excess of 40 mm, most likely over parts of southwest England and the West Country and also where showers line up into bands across east and southeast England.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 00:15 on Mon, 13th Oct 2014 until 23:00 on Mon, 13th Oct 2014

Bands of rain, some heavy, and accompanied by strong northeasterly winds for a time, will affect southern and eastern parts of England through Sunday night and at times during Monday. This is an update of the warning issued on Sunday morning, now including the eastern side of Cornwall.

The public should be aware of the risk of localised surface water flooding.
