++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Low cloud, mist and patchy fog will lift through this morning. Then mainly dry with variable cloud and sunny spells, cloudier across central and eastern England. Turning cloudier over northwest Scotland and Northern Ireland, with occasional rain later. Low cloud, mist and fog patches are likely overnight, mainly in the east.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:

Rain edges into northern England on Friday with fresher, brighter and showery conditions following. Elsewhere, mainly dry with variable cloud, possibly thick enough for a little patchy rain in the southeast. Cloud and rain clears southeastwards Saturday with drier and brighter conditions following with sunny spells and isolated showers.
