++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Persistent rain will affect southern Scotland today. Other parts of the UK will have a mixture of sunshine and showers. In Kent and East Anglia, showers will be heavy, thundery and long-lasting, so localized flooding is a possibility here. Overnight rain will affect parts of Wales and Scotland, whilst England and Northern Ireland will stay mainly dry.

Outlook for Tuesday and Wednesday:
Heavy rain will move eastwards across the southern half of England and Wales tomorrow. Further north, there will be sunshine and heavy showers, though Northern Ireland will stay mainly dry. Wednesday will be dry with sunny spells for most of us.
