++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Northern and eastern Scotland along with eastern England, cloudy with outbreaks of rain, some of this heavy, particularly for eastern Scotland. Elsewhere, bright or sunny intervals, but also showers for the southwest, these becoming increasingly heavy with a risk of thunder. Mild and breezy. Tonight, little change, further rain in the east, showers for the southwest, otherwise dry and mild.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:

Rain across eastern England and eastern Scotland will clear on Thursday, otherwise all areas will have clear or sunny spells and showers with the heaviest of the showers in the southwest. It will remain mild and at times, rather breezy.
