

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Thursday 06 May 2010

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Mainly dry and bright across southeastern England, Scotland and Northern Ireland, but cloudier elsewhere with occasional rain or showers. Showers may be locally heavy and thundery across south Wales and southwest England. Overnight, it should be largely dry with only isolated showers across far southwestern parts, and occasional rain for northeast England and Scotland. Feeling chilly despite light northeasterly winds.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:

A mixture of sunshine and showers on Friday, with the brightest weather across northeastern parts of the UK. Occasional rain is expected for England and Wales on Saturday, with brighter conditions across Scotland and Northern Ireland. Northeasterly winds will strengthen.

(C) Crown Copyright 2010. Published by the Met Office.