++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Much of England and Wales will be dry, largely sunny and very warm. Scotland and Northern Ireland will be cloudier, with some rain and brisk winds in northern and western Scotland. An isolated thunderstorm is possible in northeast Scotland too. Little change is expected overnight and it will be warm again in southeast England.

Outlook for Wednesday and Thursday:

Very similar weather overall but perhaps a little more cloud around in Wales and northern England on Wednesday, with isolated thundery showers possible in southeastern areas of England. Conditions should start to improve in the northwest of Britain on Thursday, with less cloud and less rain.
