++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Mainly dry across southern and eastern parts with sunny spells. Outbreaks of rain across the northwest will slowly push south across the UK, fragmenting as it does so. Windy for all, with gales in the north. Overnight it will remain windy and largely cloudy. Outbreaks of rain will continue across northwestern parts.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:

A brighter day on Thursday with sunny spells. Best of the sunshine once again across the south and east. Cloud increasing across Northern Ireland and western Scotland during the afternoon with rain arriving here by the evening. The rain will then push southeast across the UK through Friday.
