

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Thursday 14 Dec 2017

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
There will be sunshine and wintry showers today, with longer spells of rain, sleet or snow at times in the west. The best of the sunshine will be in the east. Staying windy in the south, but winds easing further north. There will then be a mix of clear spells and wintry showers overnight, with frost and ice forming.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:
Staying cold on Friday with plenty of sunshine after a frosty start, but northerly winds will bring scattered wintry showers to windward coasts. Saturday will be cold but fine in the east, whilst cloud and patchy rain will affect western parts.

(C) Crown Copyright 2017. Published by the Met Office.