

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Sunday 29 May 2016

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Many areas will have a dry day with warm sunshine, although some eastern coasts will be cooler and cloudier at times. Scattered heavy and locally thundery showers will affect northwest Scotland and Northern Ireland and it will be cloudier and breezier in the southeast later. The showers will then ease overnight, with clear spells in the west.

Outlook for Monday and Tuesday:

Monday then looks to be mostly fine in the west with some warm sunshine for many. Further east it will be cloudier and windier with rain developing across east and south-east England later. This will then spread to many areas on Tuesday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2016. Published by the Met Office.