

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Tuesday 09 Aug 2016

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
A largely fine, dry and pleasantly warm day with sunny spells across southern areas. Cloudier in the north with scattered showers, spreading to some eastern counties later. Dry for many tonight with clear spells, especially towards the east. Rain will spread across Northern Ireland later and it will turn chilly, especially in the north.

Outlook for Wednesday and Thursday:

Eastern parts will see a chilly start on Wednesday, followed by sunny spells and showers. Meanwhile it will be cloudier across western counties with patchy rain and drizzle. Breezy on Thursday with rain at times across northern areas, but drier conditions further south with sunny spells.

(C) Crown Copyright 2016. Published by the Met Office.